FAQ for “Valentine Drawings”

1. Why are the tutorials formatted for a 6” x 9” sheet of paper?

If you fold a 9” x 12” sheet of drawing paper in half, each drawing project will make a nice Valentine card. Another option is to work on cut sheets of 6” x 9” paper and add your finished art to your Recycled Art Journal when complete.

2. What is a Recycled Art Journal?

After looking for years for an easy and inexpensive journal system for my 500+ students, I discovered that half sheets of drawing paper, punched with two holes on one end, held together by book rings, made a journal that could grow throughout the year. It got its name from using old cardboard for the covers.

Here are a few of the reasons why I like this system so much:

It saves money. Each journal requires only two book rings per student, art paper cut in half, a paper cutter, and a two-hole punch. The covers are free if you recycle by having students bring in old cereal boxes, toy boxes, etc.

It saves time. No more sorting of artwork. Each student is responsible for finding their journal and putting away their own art at the end of each class.

It cuts down on unfinished student work. The 6” x 9” paper is much easier to finish than the usual 9” x 12” size, especially if your art class is 45 min. or so. Have early finishers? They can easily flip back and work on incomplete projects.

It helps art get home safely. Single projects that go home in backpacks often get folded and beat up in the process. This guarantees some protection for the art until the end of the year.

Parents love it. They can save all their child’s work in one place too.

Watching journals grow instills a sense of pride. Students start to appreciate that some things take time, like making a large book of one’s own art.

3. What do you need to make Recycled Art Journals?

Cardboard. 6" X 9". Some options are old cereal boxes, toy boxes, anything that is clean, large and easy to cut with a paper cutter. Plain cardboard is good too.

Paper. 6" X 9". Easy if you start with 9" x 12" and then just cut in half.

Paper Cutter. I prefer the old dangerous type with the arm that comes down, because it works fast and cuts through even heavy cardboard. The sliding arm type works too though, especially if you stick to lighter weight food boxes.

Two-hole Punch. There are many types, all seem to work well. Mine came from Staples, cost about $15, and lasted for years.

Book Rings. If you just need a few, Staples sells 16 for $5. If you need bulk, try searching Amazon. I found boxes of 100 for $10. I recommend the 1.5" size so your journal has room to grow.

4. What media is recommended for these Valentine tutorials?

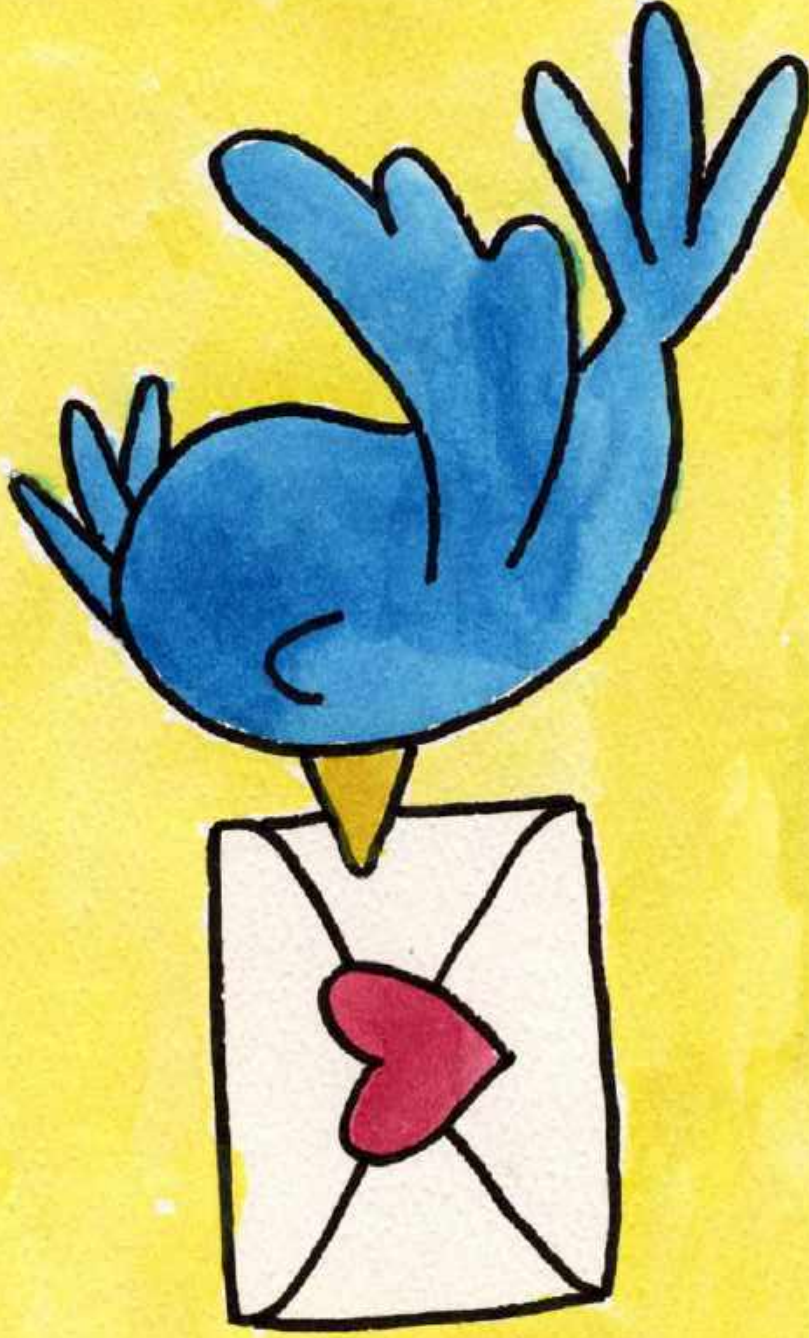

You could certainly use crayons or markers for these tutorials, but the Valentine theme offers a good excuse for mixing pretty pinks and pastels.

I recommend tracing the main drawing with a RediSharp permanent marker (they don't bleed through and make the inside of your card look bad) and a thin Sharpie for smaller details.

I used Prang Oval 16 Watercolor paints on watercolor paper to make my sample art. The 16 color palette, including white, offers all sorts of color mixing options.
